

Press Release 01/2013

The Master Online Study Program Advanced Oncology accredited until 2016

The international study program Advanced Oncology of Ulm University, Germany, was accredited until September 30, 2016. On the occasion of this event, the vice president for studies, teaching and international affairs, Prof. Dr. Stadtmueller handed over the certificate of accreditation with the seal of the accreditation council to the scientific director of the study program, Dr. Uta Schmidt-Strassburger.

This accreditation ensures the national and international recognition of the final degree of this study program in terms of quality of teaching. Furthermore, it serves students reliably as an orientation in terms of quality of the offered study program.

After two years of studying, the first physicians obtained their master degrees during the year 2012. Besides modules on interdisciplinary oncology, clinical research, advanced therapies and integrated therapeutic concepts and management, a focus was put on international networking and exchange with colleagues. Persisting high numbers of applicants demonstrate the international demand for this unique offer in the field of oncology.
