Master Online Advanced Oncology program celebrating its second graduates

After a final attendance seminar, filled with examinations, lectures and presentations of their Master's theses, the second cohort of students - together with the program's scientific director and the supporting team - was able to look back on a successful 2-year study period. Besides the modules on Interdisciplinary Oncology, Clinical Research, Clinical Oncology as well as Management that have been taught since the beginning in 2011, the program centered on international networking and scientific as well as personal exchange among colleagues, for which the Science Conference Center of Ulm University "Reisensburg Castle" provided the perfect environment. In the course of a banquet the graduates obtained their "Master of Science" Diploma, which was handed over by the Vice President of Ulm University and the Secretary of the Comprehensive Cancer Center Ulm. The study program was successfully launched and the annual number of applicants reflects the international attention this unique academic program receives. Read more at www.masteroncology.de
